Caused by Gas.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 19.—The mystery of the explosion which ruined three buildings on Monday night has been solved. Grabervoski, the jeweler, in whose shop the explosion occurred, was intoxicated and left the gas escaping when he closed the store. He also left a lighted oil lamp on the floor. When the room had filled with gas the disaster occurred.

A TRAGEDY.

A Man Killed by Falling Down Stairs.

Yesterday morning about 5 o'clock W. D. Cahill, a miner recently arrived from South Camp, was found at the foot of the stairway leading up into the Briggs House, unconscious and bleeding from a wound back of the ear.

An APPEAL reporter learned that the man got on a spree Wednesday night. In his wanderings he was accompanied by a youth named Cahill, though not a relative.

About 2 o'clock Thursday morning he was seen in Rosenbrock's saloon, where he spent some money for drinks. After visiting other saloons he was seen about an hour later in the streets of "fast town," quite intoxicated. Here he was heard to make remarks to the effect that some person whom he thought was his friend had not treated him right and that he would "do" him yet.

He must have spent all his money before going to that section of town, as he had attempted to get credit at two saloons on the way.

Officer Pickler saw Cahill going up the stairs of the hotel, and as he was pretty drunk asked him if he could find his room. With an oath he replied:

"Of course I can, or I wouldn't be trying."

Pickler concluding that the man was able to shift for himself left him. Cahill's room was on the third floor of the hotel, and the theory is advanced that he fell backwards down the stairs leading to the third floor, his head coming in contact with the steps, inflicting the wound which subsequently caused his death.

He was evidently dazed by the fall and lost his reckoning, as blood-finger marks on the wall show that he had turned into a hall on the second floor, and probably discovering his mistake came out again as shown by the imprint of his fingers, (which had come in contact with the wall) on the wall.

It is thought he became dizzy here, lost his balance and fell down the stairs leading to the street. After reaching the foot of the stairway he probably became unconscious and was found in that position yesterday morning.

Another theory is that someone with whom he had probably quarreled lay in wait for him at the head of the stairs, and dealt him the blow, knowing that everything would go to show death was caused by falling down stairs. This idea is discredited, though inmates of the hotel claim to have heard voices, scuffling and also groans. As the man's watch was found on him it is evident there was no intention of robbery.

The man was removed to a vacant store shortly after found, dying there about 1:30 yesterday afternoon.

Officer Pickler states that he saw the man to the hotel about one o'clock a. m., and a lady in the hotel positively states that she heard talking, scuffling and noise of a falling body. According to this, and in view of the fact that he was seen up town later, the man must have gotten up after going to bed, and perhaps got into a row and was sandbagged. It is a mysterious affair and the Coroner's jury which was called last night will continue the inquest until 9 o'clock this morning.

A Card.

The following communication was sent to this office yesterday, and as the APPEAL editor was not present at the exercises, it is published without comment:

Carson, April 19.

ED. APPEAL:—In mentioning the exercises in Miss Gillooley's room yesterday the News says:

The exercises closed with an original travesty by Harry Brule, Elmer Gibson, Selig Olcovich, George Franter and John O'Brien, bright in its way, but it was out of place in the schoolroom. The boys were unconscious of any wrong and were honest in their presentation of the piece, but they should have submitted their work to some more mature mind before they essayed a public representation.

The News Editor complimented the participants as soon as they returned to their dressing room, but when she heard Prof. Howe's remarks, she evidently took the cue from a more "mature mind" and changed her views.

There was nothing disgraceful or insulting said during the show and the boys have nothing to be ashamed of. The play had been submitted to several "mature minds" and considered fit for production, and the general opinion of the audience is that the show was very good for such young people, and pleased all who heard it. It is the intent of the boys that should be considered, and surely no one will contend that they intended to hurt anyone's feelings and I have yet to hear that anyone's feelings were hurt. I believe that Prof. Howe's remarks were really intended to soothe any hard feelings that may have been generated, and not so much meant as a rebuke to the boys. A SPECTATOR.

The University President.

It is rumored that President S. A. Jones will shortly resign. The Board of Regents have been aware of President Jones' intention of leaving the University at the end of this year for some time and have been on the lookout to secure the services of as able a successor. Among those who have applied for the position are Dr. Stubbs, of the Berea University, Ohio, Dr. Ewan, of the Stanford University, E. C. Fernald, of Dover, Maine, Dr. Bates of the Berkeley Gymnasium and E. J. McEwen of Logan, Utah.—Journal.

Is it possible that Nevada has not a man capable of fulfilling the position?

Last Night's Party.

The dance given by the Junior Turn Vorens last night at Odd Fellow's Hall was a pleasant and well attended affair. The music was up to the usual standard and the decorations called forth the admiration of all present.

During the evening there was an intermission and all repaired to the Ormsby House, where a fine spread was partaken of.

The young men are to be congratulated on the success of their first anniversary ball.
